AGAIN THE STARS

A new storm is coming...
A real letter to the future of mankind.

In the coming years, when climate change will provoke the biggest crisis that man will ever have to deal with, we will turn our gaze to the past. Looking back at the many mistakes we have consciously made over the years, we will then ask ourselves only one question: "How could we have allowed this?". For this reason, a group of 6 people, among whom actors Maya Sansa and Giuseppe Cederna and doctor Franco Berrino, have left their homes, their phones and all their comforts to embark on a 7-day walking journey through Val Grande, the largest wilderness area in Europe. Over 150 square kilometers of pure nature.

With only their backpacks and thoughts, immersed in a primordial nature and far from the society which has shaped them, they had the task of finding an answer to the above-mentioned question.

It has never been a problem of numbers, data, knowledge or predictions, but exclusively the fault of our own human nature. We continue to hope that the present may still be able to change the future that seems so distant, but is actually so near.
