

MOSCOWLUTISM

An extraordinary identity quest in the dystopian metropolis that absorbs everything and everyone.

Moscow is the capital of the Russian Empire, which has swallowed up a lot of nations, cultures and human destinies over its long history. This is a story of love and hate for the city that took away the past of each of the characters. A tech city of digital dictatorship, dotted with cameras and cops watching every move of its residents. The heroes of the documentary: representatives of the former or current Asian colonies of Russia, who live in different parts of the metropolis. All the characters in the film have become part of this city, and after the start of the war they have to prepare to solve the main question – how to live on?
