THE REVOLUTION

Two boys and a girl perform a violent act in the name of the ideals they believe in, but a tragic accident will challenge their convictions.

Ludovica, Tommaso and Raffaele have grown up fostering the myth of the intellectuals of the 1960s and 1970s and of armed militancy. The three, who are about twenty, cultivate their humanistic and revolutionary ideas. They live in an apartment that they use as a lair, a protected environment that fulfills their wish to escape reality. In the apartment, the three decide to banish all technological devices and expressions of contemporary language, organizing independent study programs, in sharp contrast with their university courses, living without any rules or obligations, planning to write a novel. The three live in harmony, fearlessly exploring their sexuality and mutual emotions in a relationship of love and friendship. After learning that a fascist gang raped a 15-year-old girl, the three plan to carry out a revenge attack, in the name of the ideals they believe in. During the aggression, however, they will kill an innocent young boy: a tragic turn of events that will challenge their convictions and reveal the contradictions of their relationship.
